About Henna

Henna is a herb that is turned into paste, which can then be used to dye hair, skin, and nails.

The practice of Henna designs originated in Egypt and is currently widely used in Egypt, Somalia, Nigeria, Ethiopia, Morocco, Palestine, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and more. Henna is also widely used by Muslims and Jews.

Henna is used for celebrations such as weddings, birthdays, and the birth of babies.

After Care

After applying Henna on skin, it is recommended to keep it on as long as possible. Henna can either be washed off or peeled off after drying. Lemon juice or oils such as coconut oil, olive oil, or jojoba oil can be applied for a better stain.
